and with the adoption of sanitary and other improvements it is inevitable that there should be some addition to the number of offices and consequently some increase in the cost of the administration. The Water and Drainage Department, for instance, is a new and expensive branch of the service : the Surveyor-General's Department has been largely strongthened with a view to the execution of the numerous public works which were considered necessary; the Observatory staff recently published report on the Botanical and Afforestation Department it would seem that further assistance will before long be required in that branch if the area of afforestation work is to be extended. Wherever there is work that is necessary to be done the Colony can afford the men to do it, but it is hardly in a position to maintain officers without functions. Such an office, we have always maintained, is that of the Assistant Harbour Master. If the Assistant does the work it means that the Harbour Master is left at leisure, or vice versa. Captain Hastings, the Assistant Harbour Master, who is now efficiently acting as head of the department during the absence of Captain Romsey, apparently finds no difficulty in discharging the whole of the duties, and he has in addition just accepted the appointment of Superintendent of the Water Police. At present there is no salary attached to the latter office, the only advantage it gives Captain HASTINGS being that of quarters. [380] office is a new one, created for Captain Hastings's benefit, and seeing there is no salary it looks quite a harmless little arrangement. But in a year or two, if the office is continued, salary is certain to be asked for and almost as certain to be granted. If expenditure is to be kept down it must be by preventing unnecessary appointments. Mr. Wise has been proving at the Police Court during the last few months that one Migistrate is sufficient to perform all the work there, a fact which ought not to be lost sight of, because when a vacancy occurs through the resignation or promotion of one of the Magistrates it will evidently be unnecessary to fill it up. In quiry would probably bring to light other unnecessary offices. A commission to report on the Civil Service generally might result in some advantage to the Colony. An inquiry of this kind was held in England a year or two ago, and one of the recommendations was that the office hours should be lengthened. A similar recommendation might be made here, for there can be no good reason why a Portuguese or Chinese clerk in a Government office should have to work only from ten to four, while clerks in mercantile offices have to work from nine to five and often longer. The leave regulations might also be examined. In the case of a man appointed from Eng. | cocasion the train consisted of twelve carriages, | bers of the London Straits Settlements Comland considerations of health may be consimonths, odernog the annual leave of two regard to natives of the Colony. We do not wonder that the colony is disgusted at the arbitrary way in which it has been Crown colony, and in theory no doubt the power pose of the colonists as it likes. But absolutism is getting, shabby and worn-out, at any rate in English speaking communities, and any Minister with a spark of appreciation of modern sentihave communicated his intentious beforeband to those principally affected, and allowed them to state their objections, even if he subsequently overruled them. The Home Government in its dealings with China now is the slave of logic. and the man who is the slave of logic, with un-sound premisses, is hopelessly unreasonable. Lord Kuntsford has argued thus apparently: Civilised countries are allowed to send Consult to Hongkong:

China is a civilised country: China must be allowed to send a Consul to and he has reinforced himself thus :-The Straits Settlements and Hongkong are both Crown colonies: Ohina is allowed to send a Consul to Singapore China must be allowed to send a Consul to Hongkong. In the first of these syllogisms the unsoundnoss is in the statement that Chinais a civilised country in our sense of the t-rm. She has a high civilisation of her own, but she has methods Hongkong a power over his fellow-countrymen there which is repugnant to our ideas. The fallacy in the second syllogism is too obvious to us, though it does not seem to be so to the Home his own nest whilst in office, and just playing of the propose of reathering form I shown nest whilst in office, and just playing of the playing of the propose of reathering in office it would be dismissed. He therefore took the first opportunity when he met him outside. As to opportunity when he met him outside. The met him for Her Majesty's Government to refuse to acoeds to any such application if made." When Prince Kung in 1869 wanted Chinese > ing, suggested the appointment of a Cousul. the object sought to be gained was the prevenso that those grounds for the appointment of a Consul exist no longer. China has absolutely no need for a Consul at Hongkong on legitimate grounds: her subjects do not require protection with the laws and regulations under which they live there; and there is, moreover, a Protector of Chinese in the Hongkong government staff. There is no diplomatic business for the Consul to do in Hougkong that cannot be done by the Vicercy at Canton; and the Consul's assistance in police matters will be no more valuable than Hongkong police If Mr. Tso ring-lang does nothing, and he will probably do nothing for the first year, while he is on probation, there is no use in having him there; and there will be constant jealousy and friction with the Hongresidents in Hongkong have families on the mainances in the sum of $25 to keep the peace for six Hongkong will facilitate the action of the Chinese authorities if they propose to sque ze the Chinese merchants in Hongkong through Yun and stealing from her person one sarring Hougkong with our permission will have the their families The fact that the Consul is in further disadvantages of making the Chinese think that we consent to their being squeezed The Daily Press urges another consideration : that the Chinese when they see the Dragon Flag flying in Hongkong will think that China has esumed her sway over the island. On the other hand, the request to be allowed to appoint a Consul is a renewed recognition of British 69vereignty. One thing at any rate the appointment of Mr. Tso Ping lung will do: it will put the Hongkong officials on their mettle. I hey will have to look very sharp after the new Consul and after the tribe of secretaries and und rlings. whom we suppose he will bring with him. It is a creation of an imperium in imperio, and quiet as Mr. Teo may be during the first year, his runners will begin to squeeze as soon as they possibly can, so that the police will be kept well employed looking after them. If the Hongkong officials do their duty, and put their foot down promptly on every attempt of the new Consul to usurp authority over Chinese in Horgkong to which he is not entitled, we do not see that there is so very much danger in the appointment; but as it is an absolutely unnecessary concession, and cannot possibly be of any use to the interests of Great Britain. we agree with our contemporaries in regretting that
